Living Spaces

Living elements: the trend of open-plan living lives on. When all of the living spaces merge into each other, it's great if the furnishings are coordinated too. With the modular approach of our living elements, it is possible to mix and match different pieces of furniture for all living spaces in terms of form, material and colour to tailor them to individual functional requirements. Whether a wardrobe, wall unit or sideboard, individual elements can be used to divide rooms or as an eye-catcher to provide a focal point with a certain je ne sais quoi. Intelligently planned storage spaces also take on a special meaning as they discreetly conceal anything that shouldn't be visible to all. A balance of form and function.

Wohnwände

In the living room, the wall unit is a forever favourite. Light and airy interpretations of these living room classics are in demand. As for kitchens, Schüller has a whole range of design options, including fronts, carcasses and visible faces. The result is a harmonious overall impression made up of cupboard elements, wall-mounted or freestanding sideboards in 16 different combinations and tailored lighting elements – as unique as the occupants themselves.

Sideboards

Sideboards are also real all-rounders which, thanks to their generous storage space, blend seamlessly into any living or design concept and have multiple uses, whether in the hallway, living and dining area or the bedroom. With their clear lines, they give open-plan rooms harmony and structure, fit in perfectly with any living or design concept and add a special touch.

The four types of sideboards, each available in four widths, differ in their combination of open and closed shelves, pull-outs and a recessed storage area which is visually emphasised by contrasting decor. A range of base shapes provide plenty of scope for tailored designs.

Garderoben

The first impression counts: the wardrobe is often the first thing people see in a home. It can look great and catch the eye whilst providing inconspicuous storage space. Thanks to the combination of closed cupboard elements with mirrored doors and open wardrobe elements, the entrance area can be stylishly custom-designed – with optional LED lighting creating a pleasant ambiance.
